Growing Crops Flourish... When WATER IS ADDED to Sunshine

To attain perfection in flavour and the maximum of food value many fruits require an amount of sunshine found only in arid and semi-arid regions; but in such regions the rainfall during the growing season must be supplemented by irrigation.

In British Columbia 150,000 acres of land are under irrigation and crops to the value of $17,000,000 are produced annually from these lands. These crops are for the most part specialty crops and do not compete with the produce of the more humid areas. They comprise fruit, nuts and vegetables that are essential to the high standard of living enjoyed by the Canadian people; and since a substantial part of them is available for export they contribute materially to the maintenance of Canada's balance of trade.

Many prosperous communities have grown up in the Province around irrigation projects. These projects depend on the even flow of water during the growing season, which is secured, usually, by damming valleys to store the surplus water that runs off in the spring.

The Provincial Government, through the Water Rights Branch of the Department of Lands and Forests, maintains a staff of hydraulic engineers to see that water is apportioned fairly, keeps records on streams and helps farmers plan for proper development and use of the water made available. Anyone interested may secure full information from the nearest District Water Rights Engineer or from the Department at Victoria.
