MINISTER SUCCUMBS TO HEART SEIZURE

Hon. Ralph Chetwynd Dies Yesterday

Hon. Ralph Chetwynd, provincial Minister of Agriculture and MLA for Cariboo, died in Veteran's Hospital, Victoria shortly before 7 a.m. yesterday from another in a series of heart attacks which had kept him in hospital since March 11.

News of his passing was learned through a special radio report heard shortly after 10 o'clock, and within a matter of minutes it became the chief topic about Quesnel. While it was known that he was seriously ill, word of his death still came as a blow to all of Cariboo.

He was elected to the legislature in 1952 on the largest vote ever accorded a candidate in this riding, and scored repeat triumphs in 1953 and again last September.

Last September he was named Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries after heading the departments of trade and industry, railways, and fisheries in the previous governments of Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

He was known and respected by a wide circle of Quesnel residents having long been a familiar and popular figure here for years prior to his election as Cariboo MLA.

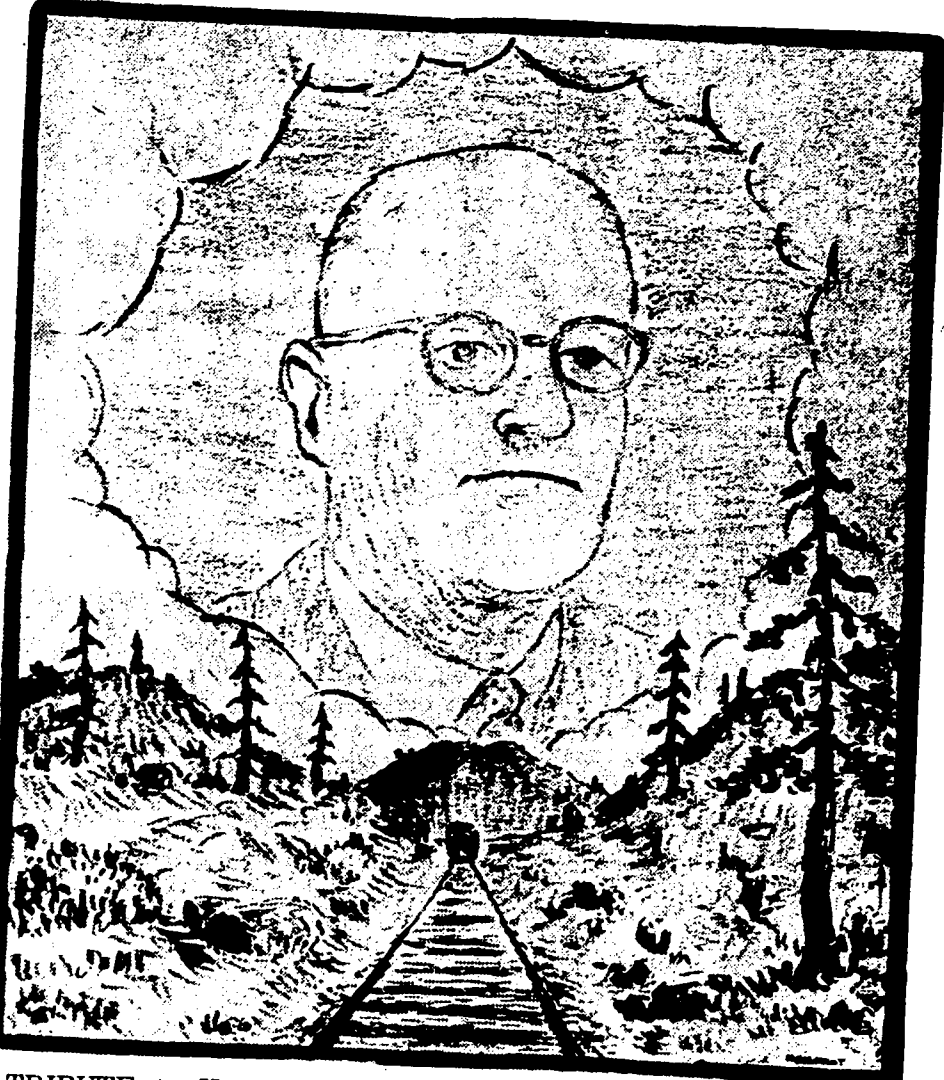

Born in Lichfield, Staffordshire, England, Mr. Chetwynd came to Canada in 1908, settling near Ashcroft. The following year he attained a degree in Agriculture at Pullman State College, Washington.

In 1912 he was appointed manager of the Marquis of Anglesey's estate at Walhachin, a post he held until 1920, with time out for service with the Royal Field Artillery in World War I, in which he was wounded during the battle of the Somme and was later awarded the Military Cross.

Livestock and agriculture were always his keenest interest and in 1920 moved to the Douglas Lake Cattle Company as a breeder and trainer of polo ponies.

In 1932 he became the marketing agent for the B.C. Sheep Breeders' Association and the Cariboo Cattlemen's Association, with headquarters in Vancouver, leaving that position to take the (See Page 4 - CHETWYND)

TRIBUTE to Hon. Ralph Chetwynd's unflagging interest in British Columbia's vast hinterland is paid in this sketch by Ernie Poignant, Observer artist, who has eloquently caught the vision of an expanding future so long entertained by Mr. Chetwynd.

Jaycees Start On Improvement Project

THREE MEMBERS of the Quesnel Jaycees are seen above drilling holes to anchor down the first of eight waste disposal cans which are being installed in the downtown area. Busy last Sunday were Gordon Sales, Art Nelson and Bert Hale. Only a few minutes after the above picture was taken Gordon Sales received eye burns when hot metal that was being poured into the anchor holes splattered. He was hurried to the G. R. Baker Memorial Hospital for treatment and was released Tuesday. The accident to Mr. Sales brought the Sunday work bee to an end. However, five of the cans were installed yesterday afternoon and the balance will be in place by next week.

Committee Set For Centennial

WORKING committees for Quesnel Centennial celebration were set up at a meeting in United Church Hall last Thursday. More than 30 representatives of service clubs and other organizations were present.

Miss Marilyn Edwards was appointed as secretary and Fred Adcock has agreed to act as treasurer.

Charles Edkins, representing the Elks, stated that Lodge would be prepared to organize any parades held in conjunction with the celebration and the Decathlon Club will spearhead the athletic committee.

Possibility of staging an historical pageant will be investigated by the Quesnel Little Theatre group.

It was decided that other committees could be left in abeyance for the time being, with the steering committee being empowered to add committees as the occasion warrants.

Polio Vaccine Due In May

INFORMATION has been received by the staff of the Cariboo Health Unit in Quesnel that the Provincial Department of Health is prepared to distribute a substantial amount of poliomyelitis vaccine for use in this area.

The group next to be eligible to receive the vaccine will be all children aged 1 to 6 years and all grade 11 and 12 High School pupils.

Those children in Grades 1 to 10 who have already received 2 doses of the vaccine will get their third dose in September. No definite date has yet been given as to when the vaccine will arrive in Quesnel but it will not be until after the Easter holidays.

CANVASS TO BE MADE TUESDAY Cancer Drive Details Complete

All details have been finalized for the annual Conquer Cancer Campaign in Quesnel which will take the form of a one-hour house-to-house canvass of the entire town on Tuesday between the hours of 6 and 7 p.m.

Mrs. Cora Westover, president of the Quesnel Branch of the Canadian Cancer Society, stated yesterday that canvassing teams would be comprised of service club members with all service clubs of the district taking part.

"Members of the Women's Institutes have always been a very great help in the annual drives," said Mrs. Westover, "and they will again be aiding this year in covering the rural areas."

The drive has been timed for the early evening since it is felt that most people will be at home then. Canvassers will be split up into teams so that the town can be covered within the hour set.

No quota has been set by the local committee since members are confident that everyone is aware of the important work being carried out by the Cancer Socety and will support the appeal for funds to the best of their ability.

This year a considerable portion of the B.C. total is being set aside for research work, but as usual funds will still be made available for the assistance of cancer sufferers requiring special treatment.

Both Mark Birthdays Today

TWO OF QUESNEL'S best known senior citizens are marking birthdays today. Mrs. Cecelia Baker, a native daughter of Quesnel, now residing with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. S. Susag, about six miles north of town, is marking her 90th birthday. Mr. John A. Fraser, pioneer Quesnel merchant, is 91. He is observing the occasion quietly at his home at 379 Wilson St. Both are extended the best wishes of a host of friends. Mrs.

Baker's picture was taken some years ago and was made available to the Observer through the courtesy of Mr. S. Susag. Mr. Fraser was snapped as he was relaxing after lunch on Monday.

WORK STARTS AT ONCE To Re-locate Plywood Road

Re-location of the Plywood Road has been approved by the Department of Highways and work on the project is getting under way at once. District Engineer H. A. Gray stated this morning that he hoped to have slashing crews busy on the new route before the weekend.

Approximately one and a quarter miles of highway will be reconstructed, with the new route swinging considerably to the left of the present road as it approaches the Western Plywood (Cariboo) Ltd. plant.

The new route will follow high ground all the way, passing to the right of a small lake and swinging around the Plywood reservoir before angling downhill to connect with the company's access road slightly south of the plant. Mr. Gray stated that a location crew has spent considerable time checking the new route and it appears there will be a good gravel base all the way. The new section takes off from the present road about a mile from the plant site.

While it is still too early to say when the project will be completed it is expected that the greater part of the work can be done within the next two months. (See Page 5 - ROAD)

WORD RECEIVED HERE FRIDAY Special Grant Cuts School Tax

There was good news from Victoria last Friday for ratepayers of School District No. 28 (Quesnel) in the form of a supplementary grant of approximately $43,000 for school operational costs in 1957-58. While it had been hoped that such a grant would be received, School Trustees had no assurance that there would be any assistance this year and had estimated that ratepayers might be faced with a tax levy of about 22 mills to meet the district's share of a $674,422 school budget.

Village commissioners are frankly pleased about the grant since it brings Quesnel's share of the school levy more in line with that of last year.

"The prospect of a 22-mill school levy was a distinct shock," said Commission chairman A. V. Fraser, "particularly in view of sharply increased assessment for a considerable number of ratepayers this year. "We had been hoping that taxes could be kept somewhat in line (See Page 5 - GRANT)

District Resident Passes Suddenly

REQUIEM MASS was observed at St. Ann's Church yesterday for Maurice Wilfred Cloutier who died suddenly at his home on the Barkerville Road on Sunday morning. Interment took place in Quesnel Cemetery.

Mr. Cloutier, who was in his 41st year, was well known throughout the Quesnel area. Born in St. Paul, Alberta, he had resided here for the past 17 years.

Besides his wife Nina he is survived by two sons, Galin 9, and Dean 5, and a daughter Camille 7; his father and mother at Mission, five brothers also at Mission, and three sisters, one in Montreal, one in Alaska and one at Mission.

B'VILLE, FRASER ROADS COME FIRST Hefty Sum Received For Work

A vote of $100,000 for road construction projects in North Cariboo in addition to the regular maintenance vote gives assurance that improvement of the Barkerville and Fraser roads will be continued this year.

Chetwynd Rites Set For Monday

FUNERAL SERVICE for the late Hon. Ralph Chetwynd will be held in Victoria at 2:30 p.m. Monday. Word of the arrangements was received here this morning.

Other improvements will also be carried out but most of the work will be concentrated on the two highways mentioned as they have been designated as the main access roads of the area.

Work has been continuing on the Fraser Road for the past several years and the program for this year should see reconstruction of the west shore highway largely completed.

Greatest portion of the grant money will be spent on the Barkerville Road. At least two extensive revisions have already been planned for this summer, and will likely be carried out now that the money for the work has been assured.

The 13-Mile sector is slated for improvement and crews will be starting on the work as soon as ground conditions will allow. A relocation of the Lover's Leap section has also been worked out and this revision will likely get under way by mid-summer.

WORTHY OF YOUR SUPPORT

Next Tuesday residents of the Quesnel area will be asked to make their annual contribution to help defeat a disease which has killed and crippled thousands of Canadians, many within our own community.

The disease is cancer, the Number 2 killer in the country. Since 1947, cancer has claimed the lives of 190,000 Canadians, but each year, thanks to the help given by the average citizen, the death toll is being lowered.

We feel that everyone should support the present campaign, which has a national objective of $2,200,000, because it is only by public support that cancer will eventually be conquered.

In just a few years, cancer research projects have been started, treatment centres established and welfare services for patients have been greatly expanded. The majority of the cost has been paid from contributions to the annual campaign.

The death figures also show the need for our support. Last year 20,000 persons died as a result of cancer. Of those, 6,500 were under 65 years of age, and more than 400 were children under the age of 15 years.

A startling fact about cancer is that the disease kills more than seven times the number who die as a result of automobile accidents.

In British Columbia the objective of the current campaign is $250,000. No definite objective has been set by the Quesnel committee, but an all out effort will be made to collect as much as possible.

Cancer can be beaten, just as other diseases have been beaten, but we can't sit back and let someone else do our job. It's up to everyone of us to do our part to beat cancer, even if that part is simply subscribing as much as we can afford when the Conquer Cancer canvassers call next Tuesday.

POWER COMMISSION LOGICAL CHOICE

Proposal of Federal Fisheries Minister James Sinclair that the B.C. Power Commission should be the body to develop the Mica Creek hydro site on the Columbia River seems a logical suggestion. Particularly as the development is undertaken jointly by Ottawa and B.C.

Mica Creek is one of the juiciest power plums in the province and if it is to be developed it is natural that other power interests than the Commission will be seeking the privilege.

But power for the Central Interior might be in jeopardy should some of the other interests get the Mica Creek rights, and such a move might spell the end for the B. C. Power Commission.

British Columbia now has one huge power corporation which controls the supply of power to the most heavily populated portions of the province.

B.C. Power Commission has been left much in the position of seeking after crumbs. Its operations are for the most part scattered about the perimeter of the zone influenced by the large private corporation. If that corporation should get the Mica Creek development the future of the B.C. Power Commission would be sealed. It would be relegated to a continual secondary position and the communities it serves might well be overlooked in the general planning of the more fortunate corporation.

On the other hand if B.C. Power Commission, an organization committed to the task of servicing all parts of British Columbia where-ever possible, secures the Mica Creek rights, cheap industrial power prospects for the Central Interior at least as far north as Prince George would be immeasurably enhanced.

It could well mean the opening of a new development for the interior of this province which would place the area on a more stable economic basis than it has ever known. At the same time there is no reason to assume that power could not be sold to any private corporation or corporations.

While government leaders in B.C. may label the Sinclair announcement as election propaganda, it is certain they will look into the matter, especially since it now appears to be a bona fide proposal even though it has been made in round-about fashion. And when government heads do look into the matter they shouldn't find the suggestion regarding the B.C. Power Commission too distasteful. After all the Power Commission is the government's own Crown corporation.

SAFETY IN NUMBERS AFTER ALL

The Observer makes a point of steering away from what are commonly termed as "scare" or "panic" topics and among these we have placed the publicity regarding the dangers of an atomic blast or the possible dire consequences of atomic fall-out.

But we are happy to report on an article from the Journal of the American Medical Association which declares that a city should be safer from atomic fall-out than the surrounding country. This at least is a ray of light through the clouds of gloom.

Granted Quesnel is not a city and will be quite content to be termed a town, but the findings reported in the Medical Association Journal apply in some degree to us.

The article discloses the findings of two researchers who contend that a city (or any larger centre of population) would be more dangerous only in the event of a direct hit.

Their theory is based on the fact that warm air rises. For instance, a city is usually warmer than the surrounding country. The rising warm air currents about the city (or larger population centre) carry solid particles, pollens, molds and radio-active particles, aloft and keep them there. They fall to the ground when there are no upward air currents, especially when the air nearer the earth is cooler than the air above it.

The city could be made even safer, they say, by artificially increasing the city's naturally high temperature. This could be done by heating houses, turning on street lights, and opening windows to the leeward side.

Even an isolated village or single residence might derive some protection by lighting fires on the windward side, which would produce upward air currents.

The greatest fall-out occurs at night and early morning, when radiation from the earth causes the air to be cooler near the earth's surface. The researchers note that at such times many people who suffer from asthma and hay fever experience their greatest discomfort, which they usually attribute to dampness instead of the real cause.

Looks like the old adage that there is safety in numbers still applies in this atomic age.

Picks "Citizen" Editorial Apart

FOLLOWING is a letter from the Board of Trustees, School District 28, which picks apart an editorial carried recently by the Prince George Citizen and reprinted in the Observer in our issue of March 21.

The members of this board have noted an editorial in your recent issue, reprinted from the Prince George Citizen and entitled "A System At Fault."

One would suppose that an editor who reprints another's material either approves of it and desires to give it wider circulation or, realizing its absurdity, prints it tongue in cheek to give his readers a quiet chuckle. We can only assume the latter applies in this instance.

However, the piece contained so many errors in both precept and reasoning that we appreciate this opportunity to make a few observations which we believe will possibly correct the impression some readers may have gained from it.

Incidentally, we doubt if the editorial truly reflects the thinking of the Prince George City Council, and we hasten to say that we by no means believe that our own Village Council would endorse most of the ideas in it.

Firstly, the "fault" is defined, in these words: "those school trustees who are responsible for drawing up the annual operating budget are not in any way responsible for raising the money to meet it." It is then stated that "there is absolutely no incentive for school trustees to whittle their costs below a scale where everything is first class" and further, that they "simply cut their plans from prime cloth and leave the stitching to someone else." On both counts, nothing could be further from the truth.

Any taxpayer who is the least bit interested knows quite well what part of his tax is levied by the school board—it is stated clearly for him to see. He knows also what portion is levied by the municipal council, and the respective important purposes for each toll. The fact that two separate levies are, for purposes of convenience, listed on the same notice and actually collected in one sum at the municipal office should confuse no one, and we doubt if it does. The inference that municipal councils are charged with collecting taxes ov-

Statute and is familiar to everyone. Except for some bookkeeping, the municipal councils are simply not "responsible for raising money."

The second assertion is even less responsible, and somewhat painful. In essence, it is that school boards pay little attention to plain ordinary economy, and when budget time comes around indulge in a merry spree of planning and buying, and hang the cost. We think this is grossly unfair—increases in building and supplies costs, teachers' salaries and so on are too well known to merit further discussion here. School boards are not immune to the squeeze which these days is universal.

True enough, education costs could be reduced. For example, on this board at present we have a trustee who effete enough to believe that education, even in these times, should be confined largely to the arts and three R's; who, had he his way, would build schools without gymnasiums at quite a saving, and has expressed these views sometimes to the weariment of the other members. Similarly, it is not unlikely that different points of view have been evident from time to time in municipal council meetings when certain community improvements have been under discussion. The problem of both bodies is the same—to provide adequate plants, facilities and personnel for the particular service required at the most reasonable cost consistent with long-term economy. The very cheapest at the start is seldom the way of true saving.

The editor deplors the fact that "the only agency able to scrutinize their budget with a view to blowing the whistle on it" takes only a superficial interest in the matter. We think his opinion might change were he to sit through a budget review with representatives of the Department of Education, and even more quickly were he a party to the many sessions of paring by the trustees before it is even presented for such review.

The matter of fairly sharing the total cost between the provincial government and the rural and municipal taxpayers, of course, is another matter; one which has for a long time been receiving careful attention of all factions. Improvements have been made, and doubtless there will be more in the future. This, however, has nothing whatever to do with the subject matter of the editorial.

A statement which we consider somewhat bumptious, and which we repeat we do not believe is the view of any municipal council anywhere, was made to the effect that "the city council has the incentive to reduce budgets which is generated by the knowledge that the public seldom re-elects squanderers." What about school boards—are trustees not elected, and from amongst the same group of citizens who compose councils? Are the public any more likely to re-elect improvident school trustees than councillors? Or, is it more important that councillors be re-elected than school trustees? This poses a delicate question, because we believe that both are very important insofar as the function they perform.

The drollery is climaxed by the editor saying that "three acceptable alternatives to the present system seem to exist." Here they are, and our comment to each:

right in the second picture. They were winners of the "B" event. The third picture shows Frank Hughes, Ruby McWhinnie, Helen Stevens and Johnny Lazzarin.

1. "School boards could place their own levy upon the taxpayer." Excellent—they do now.

2. "City councils could have the right to take a school budget to arbitration." Excellent—they do now.

3. "School boards could be made up equally of school trustees and city councillors." Wonderful—it is easy to get on a school board. Any councillor, we are sure, who felt he had the time, in addition to what he does now, to spend say four or five hundred hours each year on the important business of helping to run our educational system would be welcomed with open arms on almost any school board in British Columbia.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, The Board of Trustees, Quesnel School District No. 28.

post of PGE right-of-way agent and public relations officer in 1942. He served in this capacity until his election to the legislature in 1952.

He quickly realized the possibilities of the PGE and became one of its strongest boosters. When the extension to Prince George was undertaken in 1949 he made Quesnel his headquarters for weeks at a time closely following construction progress.

An ardent camera fan, he compiled a fine motion picture record of the railway extension and dearly welcomed opportunities to show his films.

After joining the legislature he became one of the strongest supporters of the move to complete the Squamish to North Vancouver portion of the PGE, and one of the proudest moments of his life was the day the inaugural run from North Vancouver arrived in Prince George.

He is survived by his wife, the former Frances Mary Jupp of Waltham, one son, Arthur, who is president of a Toronto film company, and two grandchildren. Mrs. Chetwynd, who was his almost constant companion, is also widely known throughout the Cariboo and Central B.C.

Ike Ziebart, who has managed the business since it was acquired by his brother in Jan., 1955, will be remaining in Quesnel to assist Mrs. Miller for the balance of this month.

Mrs. Miller is fully experienced in cafe operation and has been anxious to secure a business in the Cariboo for some time.

At the end of the month Mr. Ziebart will be moving to Kamloops where he will be associated with his brother Joe in the operation of four cafes in that area.

THRILL-POWER Plymouth '57

Smartest looking new beauty that ever dressed up a driveway... or caused a flurry of excitement in your neighbourhood!

Folks seem to agree that Plymouth's really a honey this year - for looks, performance, riding comfort, roominess, safety!

And who are we to deny it? After all, Plymouth does have the highest standard 'horsepower' of
